

The best prescription for pain may be the one that's never written.

Your dentist can suggest a number of options for managing your pain when recovering from dental work. And most of these are not opioids. Talk to your dentist and find out which pain management approach is best.